Championing Early-Stage Innovators & Entrepreneurs

We know what it takes to be innovative and entrepreneurial. From our small factory in 1885 to today's successful global organization, we know how important it is to help early-stage science and technology businesses like yours.

A Pioneering Mentoring Initiative

Office Hours offers companies one-on-one advice with a team of Boehringer Ingelheim professionals. They will share their experience and industry perspectives to help you progress your science. Our 'no strings attached' approach means there are no conditions associated with Office Hours, so you can be confident to have an open conversation with our expert team.

How Office Hours Works

Before your one-hour session, our team will ask you to submit some non-confidential background information on your technology and up to five questions about your programs and company that you would like advice on. This helps us get a better understanding of your needs, so we can tailor the discussion more effectively. Key areas of focus often include pre-clinical and clinical development, research strategy, business development and commercial potential.
